Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 08 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Windy with rain at times, becoming colder later.

Today:
Breezy and rather cloudy at first on Thursday though feeling slightly milder. Some occasional outbreaks of rain, especially over western hills. Becoming windy later with some brief brighter spells in the afternoon. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
A band of briefly heavy rain will sink southwards during Thursday evening, introducing cold air from the north. A frost is likely overnight as skies clear and winds become light. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Friday:
A bright but cold day on Friday with showers of rain and sleet in the afternoon, these turning to snow over higher ground. A cold and frosty night ahead. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold with further wintry showers on Saturday and Sunday, though with plenty of sunny spells. Likely becoming drier and milder into Monday, but with widespread overnight frosts remaining likely.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.